Here are 5 mindset differences between people who struggle with money vs. people who succeed:

1. Strugglers have loosely defined goals without deadlines while the successful have highly defined goals with clear outcomes and timelines.
2. Strugglers hand down their limited beliefs about money to their children while the successful hand down their unlimited beliefs about money to their children.
3. Strugglers believe more money will make them happier while the successful know money has little to do with happiness.
4. Strugglers are careless and unplanned with their attention, time and money while the successful are very intentional with where they invest their energy, time and money.
5. Strugglers know more than the experts and would rather be entertained than educated, while the successful know what they don't know and would rather be educated than entertained.
