During your full-time working years, use your earned income to invest in assets that grow and will produce a future cash flow for you. Self-made multi-millionaires have an average of seven sources of income. Why should you care? Well, your income generating assets release you from having to fully depend on your paycheck. By having seven streams of income under your belt, you prevent your main source of income from being spread too thinly.

This infographic above gives some good examples to consider. For the "profit" income stream, I would actually label that "private business" to either represent a business you own or a business you've invested money into (the only one of these eight I rarely see is royalty income). Robert Allen said, "In today's uncertain economy, the safest solution to be wealthy, to be in total control and enjoy freedom for you and your family, is to have multiple streams of income."
