My dad RETIRED on Friday!!

My mom visited his office for the “farewell lunch” party. We've talked about this moment and prepared for this day for many years, aiming to focus on having a purposeful and optimized retirement lifestyle.

He's had a great career of business leadership:

✔ started from accounting position in the food industry to CEO of a business with a billion in annual sales

✔ oversaw some large mergers and acquisitions

✔ even visited the White House and met with the President of the US multiple years personally as Chairman of a nationwide board

Most importantly, everyone I've ever met (for his 40 year career) who worked with him or reported to him told me what a great leader he was. They said he treats everyone with respect and did business with integrity. I am sharing this with you because this influences who I am and how I do business with you.

CONGRATULATIONS DAD!

I love you and admire your example!

P.S. Nice guys don't always finish last.
