"Keeping up with the Joneses" isn't a new thing – the term was coined in 1913! However, with the rise of social media, it is more prevalent than ever before.

According to a recent study, 52% of people admit to comparing their financial status to that of friends and family.

You might get caught up comparing:

- ☹️ earnings and wealth 💰
☹️ travel and vacations ✈️
☹️ appearance and attractiveness 💪 🍑 🏋️
☹️ intelligence and success 💡 📊

But happiness isn't found by focusing on what you lack. From my career advising people on their money and knowing what's behind the scenes, I can say that you never know the full story of the people around you. Don't compare your behind the scenes "work in progress" with someone else's highlight reel on social media. As the famous quote goes, "comparison is the thief of joy."

Happiness is found when you appreciate your progress while celebrating the success of others. You will be happier when you pursue the lifestyle and goals that matter to you personally, not when you are chasing what others have!!

We've hired some great team members and have capacity to bring on new clients.
